Horry-Georgetown Technical College provides work experiences to its students including Cooperative Work Experience (CWE), and Supervised Cooperative Work Experience (SCWE). This cooperative type of work experience is a unique plan of education that integrates classroom study with planned and supervised work experience. The College views cooperative work experiences as an essential mechanism in the accomplishment of the College's responsibility for providing a broad range of occupationally oriented programs designed around the specific needs of service area industries and businesses and to educate and train technicians for the job market.
